14 SEPTEMBER 2022

Jonas Russi is the new king of TOR330 - Tor des Géants®

The enormous advantage accumulated along the 330 kilometers that from Courmayeur, from where he left on Sunday morning at 10, brought him back to the foot of Mont Blanc, allowed him to better manage not only the great effort but also the rain, during the last night: Jonas Russi, therefore, is the new king of TOR330 - Tor des Géants®. The Swiss arrived in Courmayeur at 8.31 after 70 hours 31 minutes and 36 seconds.

Russi was speechless - both because of the fatigue (he slept only 17 minutes) and the emotions for his undertaking.

A desired undertaking, sought after, after the bitterness of last year when, on his debut, he abdicated after the Champillon Refuge, giving way to Franco Collé, to whom he had stood up to there and with whom he had won the SwissPeaks 360 in 2020. This year the Italian already retired on the first evening, then slowly all his other direct opponents, and so Russi started alone without wanting to save his energies. His advantage over his pursuers increased to over five hours, but he did not want to make any calculations despite the fact that at the eve he had some doubts about his physical condition and was undecided whether to participate in the toughest endurance trail in the world.

Russi, born in 1985, two weeks before the start of the TOR had run the 170 kilometers of the Ultra-Trail du Mont-Blanc in an excellent manner, finishing in eighth position, as well as having obtained a sixth place at the Lavaredo

Ultra Trail at the end of June.

Behind him the three Italians are arriving, with Simone Corsini leading over Andrea Macchi who in the meantime has detached Andrea Mattiato. For the women race, here is yet another twist of the race: between the Magià Refuge and the Cuney Sabrina Verjee has surpassed Silvia Trigueros Garrote, in crisis as she had perhaps never seen in recent years at TOR.

TOR130 - Tot Dret, in the lead is Henri Grosjacques

Starting at 9 pm yesterday from Gressoney, the race immediately became interesting with last year's winner, Henri Grosjacques, already setting the pace, closely followed by the Belgian Gooris Florentin and the French Florian Imbert.

On the other hand, one of the great favorites of the eve, Cristiana Follador, leads the ranking among women in front of Alessandra Boifava and Oksana Riabova.

TOR450 - Tor des Glaciers, Raichon and Plavan always in command

Sebastien Raichon's domination continues in the TOR450 - Tor des Glaciers: the Frenchman travels with about 6 hours ahead of the couple made up of Tiaan Erwee and Luca Papi. For the time being, Marina Plavan is resisting the return of Isabelle Ost, who has been behind for about two hours. Further behind the third in the standings, Nicky Spinks.
